

Sirs & Madams:

I'm an XM satellite radio subscriber. I really enjoy the service... if broadcast radio had higher standards of quality, better music programming, and less ad clutter, we wouldn't need satellite, but there you are.

The NAB's petition (04-160) sounds like a fear-driven attempt to limit competition. The broadcasters should improve their own programming -- a much better way to compete than asking government to step in and over-regulate the satellite people.

Thanks for your consideration.
